Suction Devices Helpful in Ridding Sinuses of Infectious Material

By DR. MORRIS FISHER

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine.

Whenever infectious matter is present in the body, the first step is to let it out. It is hard to get infected material out of the sinuses, but there are various devices with which this can be accomplished without too much pain.

Solutions of various drugs may be used to shrink the membranes of the nose, so that the fluid can flow more easily out of the sinuses.

Various forms of suction apparatus have been developed. The physician may place the opening of the tube near that of the sinus, and thus the infectious material may be removed.

There are simple devices which can be attached to the water faucet and, when the water is turned on, be operated by continuous air suction created by the flow of the water. It merely is necessary to place the tube of the device over the opening of the sinus and then to turn on the water.

In most instances, repeated draining and washing will remove the infectious material and give the tissues opportunity to overcome the lessened amount that is left.

In severe cases infection of the sinuses persists to such extent as to endanger surrounding tissue. Cases are known in which sight has been lost because of infection in a neighboring sinus. There are other instances in which the infection has extended from the sinus to the eustachian tube and then to the ear. Ultimately the mastoid process may be involved.

Constant swallowing and inhaling of infectious material that drops into the back of the throat may lead to secondary infection of the lungs, resulting in bronchitis or pneumonia, and even to infection of the stomach and intestines, although the gastric juices in the stomach usually will destroy germs which come down in ordinary amounts.

Sometimes, however, the infections are so serious that surgical operation on the sinuses is necessary. In older people, when the antrums or sinuses in the side of the nose are involved, it may be necessary to remove all infected tissue in relationship to these sinuses and to clean out the infected bone at the roots of the teeth.

An opening into the sinuses from the mouth made in this way will permit drainage and healing of the diseased membrane.

It is also possible to make an opening into the other sinuses by surgical methods. These operations, however, are difficult and not at all minor, and should be undertaken only when, in the opinion of those competent to judge, it is the required procedure.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

Ingenuity's Like Money for Christmas

This is the first of a series of three special articles by Olive Roberts Barton, famous child training expert, outlining suggestions for making Christmas merry for children.

Well, here's Christmas. Now don't sigh and look sadly at the children and say to yourself, "Poor little souls, I don't see how we can manage it this year." Of course you will manage it. You always have and you will this time, too. And you and they and everybody will be better off for it.

But, having lived through a good many Yules, I can give some advice. Don't take it unless you want to. That is understood. Advice is always easy to give and hard to take. But, hark!

This I believe is going to help. It makes things easier.

First of all, don't go scrubbing the house until you're half dead. But if you insist, make all the youngsters help as they never did before. Let Santa Claus put up with soot, a little smoke on the window panes won't discourage him. Treat yourself to a broom for your housewifely conscience. Get rested.

Next, don't promise the children the moon. You will worry yourself to death about the wheel you promised and see no way to buy.

Don't run up bills that you have no hope of paying. If you do, you will lie awake in your kerchief and cap and wish Santa Claus was at the bottom of the sea. Spend what you can, or can pay later with appropriate ease, and don't let the glitter and excitement lift you out of your shoes. Let Mrs. Whats-her-name buy the stores out, more power to her, but don't feel badly about it or get jealous and light on Dad because there isn't more money to spend on extras.

Smile from now on. Whether you have a hundred dollars to spend on gifts, or only a hundred cents, let what it shall buy. If I had a hundred cents, I would use my brains overtime to make up in fun and gaiety, in my small investments, what they lacked in intrinsic value. Merriment is half of Christmas anyway, or all of it.

Children love color. Christmas needs color. Get all the color you can for your dollar. Surprising what fun and color do. But, if you have more to spend, you can spend your values. Worth is always to be considered.

Make trips to the stores when they are not jammed. Early morning is fine. You will do them and yourself a favor. Decide what to look for. Don't moon and guess. It will wear you out. Remember, you are to well on Christmas. And happier than at any other time of the year.

Get the children to work on their own little gifts. Let each of them make part of them. And give each child what you can spare to do his own shopping. Never mind what he gets. It is Christmas. Have each one choose a less fortunate child for a gift. Let him wrap it and carry it over.

Have secrets. But don't let the fry get so excited they can't sleep or eat. Go ahead and tell them there is a Santa Claus. You will do it anyway. It never hurt anybody. We all believe in St. Nick. We even hope he'll cure our chilblains. Nicht wahr? Nest-ce pas?

Now, let's see. Don't be that way about a tree. Do get one, if you have to go out some dark night with an axe. Ornaments? Well, if the old muske in the attic fell on last year's and smashed them, and the purse won't buy a glass and glass balls too, then string some popcorn, and use cotton. But have the tree. Get a little hay about it all. Gaiety, that's the idea.

And now that I have eased your conscience, and rested your feet, as well as given you a sleeping powder, so right out and do as you like. But don't be gloomy. Smile and sing and forget the kitchen walls. They'll do.

Tomorrow: Gifts to make.

HOLLYWOOD

By Paul Harrison

There's Comedy, Not Glamour, in Movie Folks' Weddings!

HOLLYWOOD.—So many screen celebrities have been getting married lately that the wedding bells have been clanging like an alarm clock.

But movie players' weddings are so different from those of other people, except that the former usually are quiet little civil ceremonies, hastily arranged and with none of the pomp that most brides like to have.

And the bridegrooms, though they may have played a hundred difficult roles, are just as flustered and clumsy and inarticulate as any bridegroom anywhere.

There was the Caliban and Ariel affair. John Barrymore discovered, when the time came to buy the license, that he had exactly 16 cents, a lath-key, and a collapsible corkscrew in his pocket. So Miss Barrie opened her purse and bought the license.

Mr. Barrymore then began searching for the ring. He probed methodically and it was plain that he just didn't have it.

He said he was sorry, but he must have put on the wrong pair of pants. Hence no money, no ring.

A ring finally was borrowed from one of the witnesses. It served well enough.

Disappearing Act

Harry Ritz, youngest of the mad Ritz Brothers, and a secret bridegroom of some three months ago, was spotted in his model-bride in a quiet civil ceremony in New Jersey.

It was quiet enough, anyway, until Mr. Ritz dropped the ring. The service stopped right there while everybody, including the minister, got down on hands and knees and poked around under furniture to find the missing ring. It was more elusive than a collar button, grumbled the bridegroom.

When Errol Flynn married Lili Damita, he couldn't find the ring, either. Went through all his pockets while witnesses stared and the bride looked pained. Then the minister said, "Er—ah-em, pardon me—" and pointed.

Mr. Flynn had the ring stuck on the end of his right thumb, but was too numb with nervousness to feel it.

Emergency Bouquets

Before Arthur Hornblow and Myrna Loy began taking their vows in Escondido, Old Mexico, he, too, thought he'd lost the ring, but it turned out that the best man hadn't trusted him to carry it. It was discovered, too, that Hornblow had neglected to provide a bridal bouquet. The best man rose to the emergency again, vaulted into somebody's garden and picked one.

Melville Schauer also forgot about a bouquet for Rosita Moreno when they went to Yuma, Arizona, to be married. But Justice of the Peace E. A. Freeman was prepared for such lapses at hours when the town's three flower shops were closed. He gave the bride a package of flower seed to hold during the ceremony.

You see how simple and unpretentious some of the movie weddings are! Ralph Forbes and Heather Angel just about had to hitch-hike to their. It was an elopement to Yuma, and their car broke down en route. They did thumb a few miles, then Forbes rented a 1922 flivver and they rattled on to the screen colony's Gretna Green.

J. P. Ogles Bride

The marriage of Harpo Marx and Susan Fleming was so simple that neither of the principals now seems able to recall where it happened, or exactly when. One thing Harpo does remember, though, is that the justice of the peace was not overburdened by the dignity of his office.

He cast a brief and disparaging glance at the bridegroom, whom he didn't recognize, and a long and appreciative look at the bride—and then impudently tried to make a date with her!

Harpo wishes now that he had got his red wig and an ax and had chased the guy into the next county.

Fanciest wedding in all movie history was that of Red LaRue and Vilma Banky. Samuel Goldwyn was co-starring them in his next picture, so he paid all the bills. Expenses totaled something like $25,000 when the cost of decorations and the sumptuous feast were included.

To this day, though, rumor persists

A Book a Day

By Bruce Catton

A Tale of Life, Love in a Machine Age.

There is something fascinating about those stories in which the development of our modern machine civilization is studied through its impact on individual human beings. England seems to be producing a number of writers who are getting very readable novels from this subject; among them is the talented Janet Beith.

Her newest book is "Sand Castle" (Stokes: $2.50), a solid and leisurely story of a family's progress in the Manchester textile trade.

She is chiefly concerned with two brothers, who come down from Scotland to make their way in the world. She gives the out-and-the-gossamer comparison here; one of the brothers is steady, industrious, and deeply interested in the textile business, the other a light-hearted romantic who put up with his job because he must, but whose interests are far afield. Just to complicate matters, both of them fall in love with the boss's daughter. She favors the romantic one, but he is opportunely killed in the war, and so she marries the other—who then goes on to take over the business during the shifting, puzzling years of the first third of the 20th century.

It must be said that the story has a tendency to drag, here and there; but, for all that, it is a thoughtful and intelligent study of changing ways in the world of industry, and of the manner in which these changes affect the lives of living folk.

Miss Beith has a good eye for character and a flair for presenting it; all in all, "Sand Castle" must be put down as a worthy effort.

HALF-ACRE in EDEN

BEGIN HERE TODAY

MARCIA CANFIELD, daughter of wealthy PHILIP CANFIELD, meets BILLIE McDUGALL, artist, shortly after the mysterious disappearance of FRANK KENDRICK, to whom Marcia had been engaged. When shortages are found in Kendrick's business affairs, Marcia is more shocked than heartbroken. She realizes she was never to love with him.

McDougall, by creative and DOROTHY OSBORN, who dislikes Marcia, tempts him to believe Marcia is engaged to another man. There is a bank holdup and police commander the Canfield are to follow the bandits. The car is wrecked and both Marcia and her father are injured. McDougall, arriving with Dorothy, arrives on the scene and takes Marcia and her father to the hospital.

Their injuries are slight. Although Marcia's arm is in a sling, she takes part in the amateur play, "Half-Acre in Eden," a short time afterward. A New York producer attends the performance and offers Dorothy Osborn a part in his new production.

Marcia plans a party for Dorothy. Dorothy, deeply touched, confesses her long-standing jealousy, and the conversation results in a new understanding between the two girls.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXIV

DURING the remainder of the week Marcia busied herself with plans for the Saturday night party celebrating Dorothy Osborn's chance on the Broadway stage. She decided, with Helen Waddell, whose help she had enlisted, to deliver the invitations by telephone, and together they made out the list.

First, of course, the other members of the cast of "Half-Acre in Eden." Then the committees which had shored in producing the play, and after that the rest of the membership of the Stageraft Guild. Thus the total Guild membership of nearly 200 was on the list of prospective guests, and, though some would probably be unable to attend, Marcia decided to invite no outsiders, since even Philip Canfield's spacious home had its limits.

Yet, as she and Helen commenced the tedious task of telephoning each name on the list, it was not long before Marcia had made an exception. The name Bradford was, of course, near the top, and Marcia was soon talking with Joan.

"The party's a grand idea," Joan said enthusiastically, "and I'll be tickled to death to come. I hope I can drag Mike out. You know how he is about parties. He'll try to abbi out of going, as usual. . . . Say, Marcia! I could let the old sourpuss have his way and bring Bruce McDougall."

JOAN BRADFORD called Bruce McDougall immediately. Mike, she said, couldn't take her to the party—she did not mention that Mike had not yet been questioned on the matter—and she must therefore be squired by the artist, or be utterly desolated. McDougall accepted, with more cordiality in his voice than in his heart, and wondered, immediately after replacing the telephone receiver, why he had not refused. He did not want to go to Marcia Canfield's house. He was ready to admit that he was a baby and an idiot, but he absolutely did not want to see Marcia in her own home, perhaps with the fiancé of whom he had heard.

He was not otherwise in communication with the Bradfords during the week, and on Saturday night arrived at their home in a taxi, prepared to find Joan alone. He was surprised, therefore, to be admitted by Mike, dressed not for imminent departure on one of his frequent evening assignments, but in all the glory of starched bosom and dinner coat, surmounted by an expression which combined the finer essences of hatred, despair and anti-social feeling.

"Are you going to the party after all?" McDougall asked. "After all is right," said Mike with extreme feeling. "After all I could do! She gets me on a committee for their crazy show, she makes me go to see the thing, and now she hauls me out on a party that has no more excuse than that the show's been given. Next thing I know she'll have me in one of their plays, in tights, I'll bet you, and a plumed hat. She's my wife and I hate her. . . . Where are you, you double-crosser? Here's McDougall."

"Hi Bruce," said Joan, coming downstairs with a clatter of heels. "Don't mind Groucho. He's feeling nasty. Let's get started."

"Why, I thought he . . . you said . . ." McDougall began.

BECAUSE of Joan's haste, the three arrived at the party before any other guests, an incident which did not serve to improve Mike's humor. McDougall was feeling hardly gayer than Mike himself. On their way he had asked himself why Joan had invited him, since Mike was available as escort. Joan plainly did not care to be questioned. She had, McDougall decided, only wanted to give him diversion; she felt responsible for him as Mike's friend.

The whole affair was so new in McDougall's experience that he had no definitions for it. His desire for Marcia, as he had come so earnestly to desire her, was, he had long ago decided, impossible of fulfillment, and the fact that he nevertheless continued to desire her was, he angrily told himself, just whining. Why couldn't he give up, he demanded, when he had to give up? Why be a baby?

"Perhaps I'm prejudiced because I'm married to the brute," Joan whispered to him when they entered the house, "but even Mike has a sweeter expression than you have tonight. What's biting you?"

MARCIA was waiting for them when they came downstairs—Marcia and Helen Waddell, her co-hostess. Marcia and Helen, and a man.

"How nice to see you again," said Joan, in her best party manner, as he came forward. "This is a surprise. Did you come all the way from Chicago just for the party?"

"No—on business, but I was lucky enough to arrive in time for this, too," he said.

It was Marcia who introduced John Waddell and McDougall. The artist heard the name, but did not comprehend. No one, in the midst of all the talk, thought to mention that the visitor was Helen's cousin.

"Of course," thought McDougall—"the man from Chicago! The man whom Marcia flew out to see, when there was trouble of some sort. Well, he doesn't look troubled, particularly. Looks very fit and confident, and, doggone it, like a very agreeable and thoroughly decent chap. Well, now I've seen him, met him. What did I expect him to be? Something to frighten little children?"

He recalled the bit of gossip he had overheard as he watched a rehearsal. "How silly of Marcia," Dorothy Osborn had said, "to fly after him." And the other woman had replied, "A woman does some funny things when she's in love with a man." From Dorothy, "I think I could give him up, under the circumstances." And from the other woman, "Marcia's different, I suppose."

Other guests had been arriving, and McDougall, separated from the Bradfords, had been edged back toward the door to a still-deserted room, Philip Canfield's billiard room. There John Waddell approached him.

"Do you play?" the Chicagoan asked, nodding toward the lighted table.

McDougall brightened; the game was his favorite, for many weeks neglected.

"Yes. Do you?" "My pal!" said John. "Let's leave the silliment and enjoy the true gentlemen's pastime." Together they entered the room. (To Be Continued.)

Roberts Believed Liberal Judge Now

Understood to Be One Who Tied Up New York Issue 4-1

By PRESTON GROVER

Associated Press Correspondent WASHINGTON.—Much freerhand opinion is available in Washington on what to make of the Supreme Court's four-four decision sustaining the New York unemployment act. The act, when the court, in announcing its decision, gives an explanation with it, somebody has to.

About the most significant thing this column heard was the master of the argument before the court when the case was presented. It was pointed out then, so a mention is enough now.

The argument skinned over the constitutional issues and went to bat on whether such an act was good and wise for New York state. If it should prove true that economic and sociological argument brought the evident switch of a conservative to the liberal side of the court, that would be immensely important.

Guessers Point to Roberts

Most guessers point to Justice Roberts as the conservative who changed position. If so, arguments can be arrayed from either side to justify his stand. It may have been economic argument. But equally it may have been his conception that legislation that is unconstitutional when enacted by the federal congress may be constitutional under state enactment.

Roberts wrote the decision upsetting AAA in which it was held that legislation governing certain aspects of the welfare of agriculture was a state domain, not federal. The same consideration may have swayed him in the New York unemployment compensation case.

For all anyone actually knows, the justices may be good-naturedly chuckling up the sleeves of their voluminous black cloaks at the brain labor they imposed upon the "inside guessers." Because of their tie decision, they escaped the need of writing any opinion on the case.

One thing about the court, its members have to come some time to a showdown. The decision they escaped writing in the New York case will be forced upon them in other cases before them or certain to reach them.

Unlike members of congress, they can't write home to their constituents that when the roll was called up yesterday they were down in the departmental chews the rag about a grant for a bridge across Kettle creek.

Praises Up With Wages

It wasn't altogether overlooked in Washington that price jumps followed close on the heels of the fancy wage increases, like breads after rubles. One day's paper brought these headlines: "Wool apparel lines advanced as wages jump," and "Six more rug firms declare price increase." Another day brought: "Steel price boost initiated, up $2 to $4."

It's getting on to Christmas! The old charm is in the air; the lips of love are whispering their secrets everywhere. And now the wide world over the tender hearts and true. Are plotting all the pretty deeds their pocket books can do. It's getting on to Christmas, rich and poor and high and low. Are gazing in the windows now with eyes that fairly glow; And all the wide world over the lovely grandmas gray. Are busy knitting pretty trophies they're going to give away. The grandpas now are trudging down the crowded streets alone; It's plain that they are cherishing surprises of their own. And all the wide world over now the little children pause To ask if their behavior will delight old Santa Claus. Oh, there are weeks when selfishness and bitterness are rife. And days when hate and malice seem to mar the charm of life. But getting on to Christmas all the old smiles reappear. And the blustering world turns kindly at the closing of the year. —Selected.

Christmas Spells Weeks of Fun, Instead One Day, for Quins

This is the second of a series of five new stories by Dr. Allan Roy Dafeo, physician to the Dionne quintuplets, telling of preparations being made for the quins' Christmas, and of their training and progress. This series, under a renewed arrangement, is written exclusively for NEA Service.

By ALLAN ROY DAFOE
M. D., O. B. E.

(Copyright, 1936, NEA Service, Inc.)
CALLANDER, Ont.—Though Christmas is still some weeks away, the Christmas spirit and atmosphere have already taken possession of the nursery where the five little Dionne girls are preparing for their third holiday season.

So that you may see Christmas pictures of the children on Christmas day, it is necessary to take the pictures in advance. This makes Christmas-time really a season instead of just a day at the nursery.

So the wrapping of presents, the cutting of two fine Christmas trees, the appearance of the red Santa Claus uniform, together with the deep blanket of snow that has for some time covered the countryside, all make up a real holiday atmosphere.

The children don't tire of it. The only effect will be to lessen the change of nervous disturbance when the big day comes. They'll be used to the festive atmosphere, and "take it in their stride."

It's Day for Children
Christmas here among the French-Canadians is largely for the children. For older people, Christmas is chiefly a religious holiday. With the older children, they all turn out for a solemn midnight mass on Christmas Eve.

The old folks have their fun later, on New Year's Day and on January 6, which is called "La Fete des Rois," or the Feast of Kings.

The Dionne quintuplets are still a young to take part in one of the important pre-Christmas ceremonies common among the French.

That is the custom of writing notes asking for presents, and attaching them to the strings of kites on some windy day before Christmas. The children believe that their letters by this informal "air mail" eventually reach the Child Jesus.

I suspect that many a time the delivery is accomplished through parents who have shinned up a tree to rescue the letter from a branch.

Hang Stockings, Too
French children hang up their stockings just as do children in the United States. But they are perhaps more careful in selection of the stockings to be hung, and in printing their names to be attached to each stocking so that there may be no mistake about who gets what gift when Pere Noel comes down the chimney, just as Santa Claus does south of the Great Lakes.

Older people have their real celebration at New Year's. But in the meantime, children have another duty during the week between. They write long letters telling of their good deeds during the last year, and excusing their bad ones.

These are placed under their father's plate at breakfast. After the father of family has given the father's blessing ("la benediction paternelle") with the sign of the cross, he reads the letters solemnly aloud. The children greet their parents, usually with the little verse:

"Je vous aime,
"Je vous adore,
"Que voulez-vous
"De plus encore."

Reunion On New Year's
New Year, when the older people exchange gifts, is the time for family reunions, rather than Christmas, which is especially for the younger children.

The Feast of the Kings on January 6 is again largely for the grown-up folks. So you can see that since the Christmas season is a three-week affair up here in French Canada, the quintuplets are not at all out of order if their Christmas festival starts a little early. Presents already are arriving for them.

Though the snow is quite deep, people continue to come to see the children, and unless the weather is especially severe or unpleasant we allow them to be seen at play in the yard, just as in the summer.

Only the other day a woman from Alaska by arrangement met her sister from Missouri here at the nursery. Each had made half of the long journey that separated them, meeting in Callander.

Family to be Reunited
Around a large Christmas tree in the dining room of the nursery, we hope to have for the first time a complete reunion of the whole Dionne family, including all 11 children. The quintuplets will have presents not only for their parents, but for all their older and younger brothers and sisters.

It will not be necessary this year for surgical gowns to be worn during helpful talks on the program. Guests other than members were Rev. Fred R. Harrison, and Mrs. Harrison and Mrs. Frank Stanley.

Mrs. Ralph Routon announces her Annual Pupils' Christmas recital for Monday afternoon at 2:30, December 21 at her residence on North Pine street.

Eyes fixed with reverence and wonder on a picture of the Child Jesus on the wall above them, Emilie and Yvonne kneel in the evening prayer that is a part of their daily routine. Note Emilie's tiny hands attempting to assume the position of prayer.

The Christmas festivities in the nursery, and there seems now little danger of winter colds being carried into the nursery by the other children.

I no longer wear the sterilized gown in entering the nursery, except for a time after I have been away from Callander.

This season, for the first time, Christmas should begin to mean something more than just a joyful party to the little Dionne girls. Nurse Noel has been stressing the story of the Christ Jesus in her readings to the children, and we feel sure that they will begin to have some understanding of the story of Christmas.

Priest Visits Often
Father McNally, parish priest at Corbeil, makes more frequent visits to the nursery than formerly, to keep in close touch with supervising the religious training of the children.

Their clear understanding of the simpler nursery rhyme makes it certain that the outlines of the story of the Child Jesus, always appealing to children, will begin to be clear to them this year.

On several occasions recently, when I arrived at the hospital, the little girls would come running to me, holding up picture books illustrated with the Christmas story, and crying out "Jesus, Jesus!" with shining eyes and great animation.

Christmas dinner for the children, however, won't be any different from that of any other day. Those pictures you see of the little Dionne girls sitting beside luscious stuffed turkeys don't mean that they eat them. They're just expressions of the holiday atmosphere.

No turkey, and no Christmas candles, is the rule. Well, maybe just a taste of turkey or a bit of cake that is not very rich.

There will be plenty of time for all these things later. I don't mean to imply that all these things are necessarily bad, but children so young can afford to wait a little.

With greater patience than ever before, with the opportunity for a family reunion around a giant Christmas tree, and with their first understanding of the beautiful story that underlies the Christmas season, we expect that Dionneville this year will have the Merriest Christmas of all.

NEXT: How the quins are taught to take care of themselves. How their day is spent and what they eat.

LONDON, Eng.—(P)—The London News-Chronicle made an analysis Monday of letters that poured in over the week-end on the subject of King Edward and Mrs. Simpson and found: Forty-nine per cent of the men favored the projected marriage.

Twenty-five per cent of the men opposed it.

Thirteen per cent of the women favored the match.

Nine per cent of the women were against it.

The analysis ignored all letters which did not express a definite opinion.

C. V. Lenz said late Monday that the swabbing would be continued to free the hole of water, slush and shale, and that the possibilities of the well could not be accurately gauged until such was completed.

Provision Made for 250,000 Farmers Dropped by the WPA

WASHINGTON.—(P)—Resettlement Administration (RA) officials announced Tuesday that 250,000 farmers in the drouth areas who are being discharged from relief jobs by the WPA would be given direct money grants by the RA.

The RA announced it would continue its policy of providing feed loans to drouth-stricken farmers to maintain livestock through the winter.

were given the right, under the prohibition amendment, to interfere with interstate commerce when it came to liquor.

There seems to be no immediate end to the matter. Home grown breweries and liquor plants can be fostered in any state by such a system of taxation. California certainly had not intended to protect itself as a dry state, for its potent wine industry it was the loudest in the clamor for repeal. California, or any other state, now may protect its liquor industry under an amendment which was intended to help smash the industry in dry states.

Labor Fears Boomerang
Often cited is the 14th amendment prohibiting any state from depriving "any person of life, liberty or property, without due process of law." It was intended to protect negroes after they were freed from slave plantations. Yet under the widespread wine of the protective "due process" clause has grown a corporate structure of tremendous proportions.

Even labor, most eager for legislative social remedies, is reputedly in a turmoil over how to phrase an amendment to get around an obstacle found by the supreme court. Labor wants federal assurance of job security. But some leaders are asking, can an amendment do this and not at the same time be used to coerce labor, or perhaps prevent a workman changing jobs on the grounds it would upset the balance of employment?

Pitt to Rely on Sophomores in Rose Bowl

Goldberg, Daddio Give Spark to Team

Washington to Find All-American Tackle, Daniel, Tough Foe

By JIMMY DONAHUE
NEA Service Sports Writer

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—Jock Sutherland's surprising sophomore of the University of Pittsburgh will attempt the feat that was impossible for three previous veteran teams which the cagy mentor led west—annex the Rose Bowl game in Pasadena New Year's Day.

The canny Scot makes his fourth trip in eight years to the west coast as head of an invited bowl squad, and frankly acknowledges that the team that caused him to out-gloom Gil Bobie at the beginning of this year has come on to a peak where it ranks with any in Pitt's history, despite the 7-0 defeat by Duquesne and the scoreless tie with Fordham. The usual taciturn Southerland received the invitation to meet Washington's Huskies with a wide grin. Here, he figures, is a chance to redeem those defeats at the hands of Stanford and Southern California in the Arroyo Seco suture.

In '27 Jock took a grand bunch of boys, headed by Tom Parkinson, Bill Kern, Mike Getto, and Joe Donchess, west to play Stanford, and was rudely jolted, 7-6. Two years later a great Pitt team, led by Jess Quaste, Toby Vansa, Jim McMurtro, and Donchess, tackled Southern California, and came away with a Panther tail twisted to the tune of 47-14. Again, in '32, Jock went west with Warren Heller, Miller Munjas, Mugsy Sklandany, Mike Sebastian, Far Ouder, Izzy Weinstein, and others, only to cry salty tears in his Scotch and soda water a 35-0 drubbing.

Tasted Bitter—Now the Sweet.

So the invitation is sweet music to Jock, who has tasted nothing but the bitter dregs of defeat in the culminating classic of the season.

Surprising sophomores were responsible for Pitt's success this year, although Southerland used his master hand at mixing in such veterans as Averell Daniel, senior and All-American tackle; Bobby (Baby Face) LaRue, senior halfback; and experienced quarterbackbacks to direct the play in Arnold Green and Johnny Wood, seniors, and Johnny Michelson, junior.

Toward the end of the season, however, even young John Chickerno, a sophomore, was handling the squad like a veteran.

Such soph-runners as Marshall Goldberg and Harold Stebbins, however, supplied the spark that ignited the Pitt machine. The latter pulled the game with Ohio State out of the fire, and the former ran wild against Notre Dame and Carnegie Tech, proving to be one of the brightest prospects in the country.

In addition to those two, Southerland got some grand halfbacking from LaRue, whose moniker, "Baby Face," belies his actions, and, after Bill Staupils, junior fullback, was injured, from Frank Patrick, replacement full.

Line plan was up to the usual Southerland standard, although it did have one lapse, probably due to overconfidence, in the game against the hard-charging Duquesne team.

Daniell Gibraltar of Line. Daniell and Bill Glassford, the big guard, stand out in the line, with sophomore end, Bill Daddio; Steve Petro, Walt Raskowski, and Al Lezowski, soph guards, and Fabian Hoffman, yearling end, shining as first year men.

Selection of the Panthers came as a surprise to a lot of people who live below the Mason-Dixon line. These good folk expected Alabama or L. S. U. to get the call—as did a lot of us above the line.

Maybe Washington is going to be a bit sorry it didn't invite one of the southerners. Jock veteran of three trips, isn't going to make any training mistakes or tactical blunders this season, having profited by previous experience.

Pitt's team is going in to prevail with a Warner system keyed to a peak against Jimmy Phelan's Notre Dame disciples.

And may the best team win!

Panthers Who Go on Prowl New Year's Day

TCU Is Considered for Orange Bowl

Definite Selection Is Expected to Be Made Tuesday

MIAMI, Fla.—(AP)—Tennessee's refusal of an Orange Bowl bid caused officials to search Monday night for another opponent for Duquesne University, northern representative in the New Year football battle.

Still under consideration to carry the colors for the south was Texas Christian University. California and Mississippi also were suggested as possible teams. The Orange Bowl committee deferred issuing a bid.

The committee said it would meet again Tuesday and make a definite selection.

The University of Tennessee declined the invitation because its team has disbanded.

Big Leagues to Open Week Later Than 1936

CHICAGO (NEA)—Major league baseball will open one week later in 1937 than it did this year. Schedules call for all teams to open April 20, except in Boston, where either the American or National League club, depending on which opens there, will get under way April 19, Patriots' Day.

Duke Wells Returns to Arkadelphia Squad

ARKADELPHIA, Ark.—(AP)—Basketball prospects at Henderson State Teachers College took an upward swing Monday with announcement by Coach Solon Sudduth that Duke Wells had come back to the Reddies fold from Monticello A. and M.

Missouri Pacific Assessment Is Cut

Arkansas Reaches Agreement With U. S. Court in Bankruptcy

LITTLE ROCK—General property tax assessments of the Missouri Pacific Railroad company for 1936 will be certified to counties by the Arkansas Corporation Commission on a basis of 75 per cent of the $25,903,400 valuation under terms of an order authorized by Federal Judge Martineau Monday.

Hearing was on the Corporation Commission's motion to modify a temporary injunction granted last June, under which certification of 1936 general property tax assessments was limited to 60 per cent. The commission sought to amend the injunction to allow certification of the taxes on a basis of 80 per cent.

Judge Martineau authorized certification of 75 per cent of the assessment, but withheld final ruling on the railroad's original application for a reduction to $15,719,000, 40 per cent less than the commission's figure.

Baby's Bath

A woman wanted to know how to use a thermometer in getting ready the baby's bath.

"Oh," Wynn replied, "you don't need a thermometer at all. Just draw the bathtub half full of water and put the baby in it. If the baby turns red, the water's too hot. If he turns blue, the water's too cold. If he turns white, he needed the bath!"

Texas Christian Invited to Meet Mississippi State College

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—(AP)—Sponsors of a New Year's "Cotton Bowl" game here announced Monday the refusal of the University of Arkansas to participate in the contest.

The intercollegiate football committee of the Chamber of Commerce, the sponsors, said that it had invited Texas Christian to meet Mississippi State in the game and should it refuse the game will not be played.

Committee officials said that Arkansas gave as the primary reason for rejecting the bid the fact that it would

Dean to Be Sold Says Card Owner

Rickey Asserts Dizzy Had Been Offered to Giants But Turned Down

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Branch Rickey strolled through the baseball market place Monday predicting "the club that buys Dizzy Dean will win the National League pennant next year," but after a day of endless babbling there were no takers.

Rickey said only three clubs in the league have enough players to deal for Dean. Presumably he meant the Giants, Cubs and Pirates.

Rickey said Dean had been offered to the Giants, but had been turned down. Philip P. Wrigley, president of the Cubs, said "I don't want Dean on my ball team."

Warren Giles, general manager of the Cincinnati Reds, who offered $200,000 in cash for Dizzy, admitted he was sure "Dean is going somewhere else."

Nevertheless, indications were Dean will be traded, Rickey said as much.

"A week ago I thought we would trade Dean and I still think so," the Cardinal official said. "If we do, it will be within the next 48 hours."

The eloquence and activity of Rickey overshadowed the rest of the delegates at the league meetings. No trades were announced though the Giants said they have made a deal for a third baseman to be announced Tuesday when the meeting officially starts. The guess was it involved Stanley Hack of the Cubs and Leiber of the Giants.

Sieve O'Neill and Rogers Hornsby, managers of the Indians and Browns respectively, were closed again Monday, talking over a trade of Joe Vosmik and Frankie Fytag of the Indians and Holie Hensley and Julius Solters. The offer was made by O'Neill and turned down by Hornsby.

Wrigley, the Cubs president, made the most surprising admission of the day.

"If I can find a man at the meetings here this week capable of taking my job as president of the Cubs, I will appoint him," he said.

Wrigley was questioned on this when a rumor circulated that Charlie Grimm would move into the Cubs' front office and be replaced as field manager by Gabby Hartnett.

Wrigley denied that this move was being considered but admitted his desire to find "someone who can give him time to do the duties of the club."

Two Hope High School football players scored their first points in their entire athletic career in the Thanksgiving Day game here against Hot Springs.

They were Zeland Holly, center, and C. V. Keith, left guard. Holly kicked two goals after touchdowns. Keith broke through the line during the early part of the game, blocked a punt and fell on it in the end zone, giving the Bobcats their first two points.

Holly played his last game for the Bobcats against Hot Springs, rounding out four years at center. Holly is the only player on the team coached by an athletic director other than Foy Hammons.

Keith, praised by Hammons as one of his most consistent and hardworking men, has another year with the Bobcats. Keith probably played more football for Hope the past season than any man on the team. He was rarely named in the line.

Keith is the kind of player Hammons is fond of. He is not a spectator's star, which often times proves to be the secret of a successful team.

One of Keith's duties the past season was to pull out of his guard position on reverse plays and furnish interference for the ball carriers.

"He always got his man," Hammons said, "and that's a big reason why our reverse plays clicked at crucial moments."

Through a pool conducted by members of the Nashville High School football team, an All-Opponent team has been selected, representing by popular acclaim, the eleven best players to perform against Nashville the past season.

Four players received a unanimous vote. These were "Nig" Bynum, Russellville's all-state tackle, Fletcher Kizzia, Camden fullback, big Joe Petrus, stalwart guard of the Subiaco Trojans, and Clifford "Tip" King, the Snackover speedster.

High Reese of the Hope Bobcats lost only one vote. The ballot for the remainder of the positions varied somewhat, with a wide range of outstanding opponents being considered. Camden led the pack, placing three men, Russellville, Hope and Subiaco gaining two positions each, Texarkant, Ark., and Snackover filled the other two positions. The team follows:

Center—Berry, Texarkana.

STORM CLOUDS AHEAD

The 1937 Hope High School football schedule will be the toughest ever attempted by the local school if present plans of Coach Foy Hammons mature.

Among the tentative games on the list are Fayetteville at Hope, Russellville, Jonesboro, Hot Springs, Camden, El Dorado, Pine Bluff, Little Rock, Snackover, Nashville and the city champions of Dallas, Texas.

Try to pick an "easy" one if you can—I can't.

The complete schedule with definite dates will be announced within the next 10 days. Coach Hammons said Tuesday.

Pat Coffee, the L. S. U. halfback and a bright star of the "Bayou Bruisers" for the past three years, is a former Hempstead county boy.

He is a brother of Carl Coffee who lives just north of the city.

We are told that Coffee once attended the DeAnn school, later moving with his parents to Minden, La., where he played high school football before going to Louisiana State.

No doubt, Hempstead county fans will be pulling for L. S. U. when the Bengals meet Santa Clara in the Sugar Bowl at New Orleans New Year's Day.

We also have it that Bobbie Martin, blocking back of the champion University of Arkansas football team, is a former Hempstead boy, once living at Spring Hill.

He is the son of Floyd Martin, now a barber at Texarkana. Mr. Martin stopped at Hope briefly last Saturday while en route to Little Rock to see his son play against Texas University.

Rumor: That "Bo" Sherman, athletic director at Monticello A. & M. college, will be a high school coach in Arkansas when the 1937 season opens.

Two Hope High School football players scored their first points in their entire athletic career in the Thanksgiving Day game here against Hot Springs.

Razorbacks' Cage Prospects Bright

Porkers Offer Another Six-Foot Quintet to Defend Title

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark.—(AP)—The University of Arkansas will defend its Southwest Conference basketball title this winter with another of those six-foot-plus squads which have made the Razorbacks a respected name among the nation's cage circles.

Opponents of Coach Glen Rose's Porkers must contend again this season with the hoop-ringing antics of Elwin Gilliland, all-Southwest forward, and of Don Lockard, the sophomore forward sensation of a year ago.

At center, the Razorbacks will be without H. L. (Ike) Poole, the all-conference pivot man of the 35-36 season, but they'll have in his place Ray Hamilton, who stands at six feet four inches. Hamilton, Razorback football end, played at guard last season.

Coach Rose also must find replacements for all-conference guard Jim Lee Howell and Ken Lunday, Jim Benton, the all-Southwest end, may be the answer to one of the problems. This six feet three inch star passed up the cage sport last year to study.

Captain Bobbie Martin, who at five feet 10 inches is one of the smallest men on the squad, heads the returning guards. Six-foot-four-inch Frank Brodie is back to assist, along with Jack Robbins, the passing star.

Among the other candidates are Bob Stout, Henry Tuck, Ralph Rawlings and Allen Keen. Stout stands six feet six inches.

Up from the 1935-36 freshman team are Glen Smith, Neil Martin, Freeman Goza and Art Withers.

The Arkansas schedule: December 17-18, Southeastern Oklahoma Teachers at Fayetteville; December 30, University of Tennessee at New Orleans (Sugar Bowl); January 2, Brown Paper Millers at Monroe, La.; January 8-9, Baylor at Fayetteville; January 15-16, Southern Methodist at Dallas; February 5-6, Texas University at Austin; February 12-13, Texas Aggies at Fayetteville; February 19-20, Rice at Fayetteville; February 27, Phil Jones Oilers at Fayetteville; March 5-6, Texas Christian at Fort Worth.

A tentative game has been scheduled with Drake University at Fayetteville on December 14.

Tigers to Try Hoosier Pitcher Next Season

DETROIT.—(NEA)—Paul Howard Trout, a young right-hander who won 8 and lost 7 for Indianapolis in the American Association last season, gets a trial with the Detroit Tigers next spring. The youngster, who broke into professional baseball in 1935 with Terre Haute, Ind., is reputed to be a strikeout artist.

CLUB NOTES

The Allen Home Demonstration club met at the community house December 2 at 2 o'clock with Mrs. Carroll Schooley as hostess. The house was beautifully decorated for the Christmas season, with a Christmas tree as the center attraction.

The meeting was called to order by the vice president, Mrs. Lee Garland. Two Christmas songs were sung, "Joy to the World" and "Hill Be Coming Down the Chimney When He Comes."

The devotional was read from Matt. 2 followed by a Christmas prayer. The minutes for the November meeting were read by the secretary.

Fourteen members answered the roll call by telling the demonstration that helped them most during the year. Splendid reports were given by all leaders.

Miss Mary Morrow gave a demonstration of making Christmas gifts, also gave patterns for gifts. Mrs. P. J. Holt told a Christmas story, bringing the program to an inspirational hour. The tree was beautiful and there were gifts for every one. An old time spelling match was enjoyed by every one. Mrs. Carroll Schooley served a delightful salad and sandwich plate with hot chocolate.

Are Reversible

PARIS.—(AP)—Reversible bird-trimmed turbans are among the newer notes in hats. They are designed so that the feathered end may be turned to the front or back, according to the whim of the wearer. Two black trim a black point velvet pill box. One black and one white bird accent a reversible taffeta toque.

THE STICKERS.

Parade for Professor

The story goes that several college presidents were discussing what they would do after they retired. "Well," said one of them, "I don't know that I'd be fit for anything, but I know what I'd like to do. I'd like to be superintendent of an orphan asylum so I'd never get any letters from parents."

"I've a much better ambition," said the other one. "I want to be warden of a penitentiary. The alumni never come back to visit."

Stamp News

By I. S. Klein

PHILADELPHIA authorities have asked the Postoffice Department to make Independence Hall the main subject of the design for one of the stamps, preferably the three-cent value, of the proposed series commemorating the 150th anniversary of the adoption of the United States Constitution.

Anthony Eden, famed British foreign secretary and roving diplomat of Europe, will be the main figure in the design for the set of four stamps to be issued by Egypt, commemorating the signing of the Anglo-Egyptian treaty of alliance. The scene will be the Locarno room of the British foreign office in London, where the treaty was signed.

The Vatican will offer for popular display the various stamp collections which have been presented to the popes. Some of these exhibits are said to be among the most valuable in the world.

Finland and Venezuela are conducting contests for designs of new stamps, portraying the most important features of the countries. The Finnish stamps will depict that country's parks and other scenic attractions. The Venezuelan set may include historical views, as well as scenic and industrial illustrations.

Marshal Joseph Joffre, great World War leader, will be pictured on a new stamp which France will issue soon on the 22d anniversary of the battle of the Marne, in which that general figured.

Between Puffs Sweet Young Thing: "Have a cigarette?" Elderly Woman: "What! Smoke a cigarette! Why, I'd rather kiss the first man that comes along!" "So would I. But have a cigarette while you're waiting."

BRAZIL'S PRESIDENT WELCOMING ROOSEVELT TO RIO DE JANEIRO

Greatest Eastern Football Crowd Watches Army Bow to Navy—

Service Tilt Rooter—

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, representing the White House at the annual Army-Navy classic, enjoys hearty laugh during game.

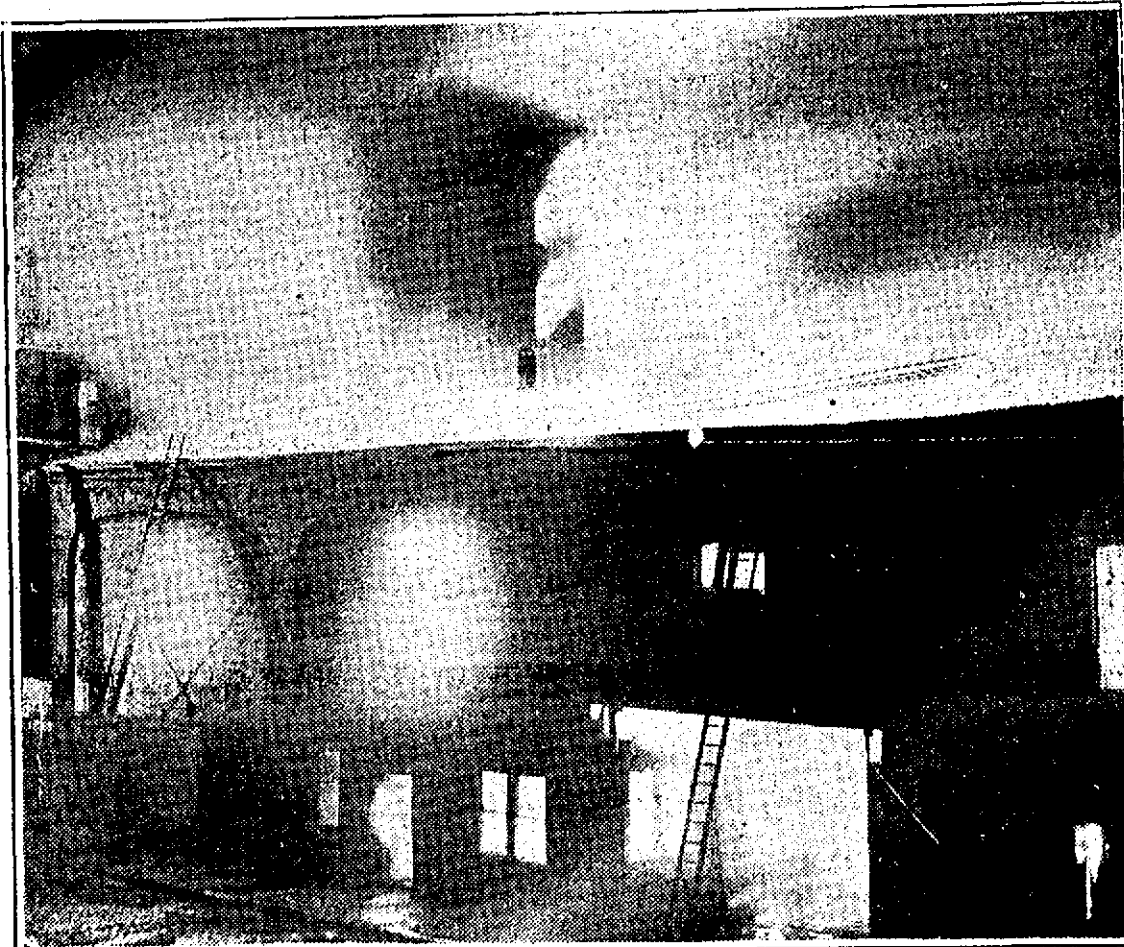

Barely Controls Ire Over Jewel Shipping—

Gypsy Rose Lee, whose "strip-act" dancing won her fame, lights a cigarette before expressing her feelings about six gunmen who stripped her of jewels worth $25,000 in lobby of New York apartment building.

Welcomed in Brazil—

President Roosevelt (left) shown in radiophoto as he listens to speech of welcome by President Getulio Vargas of Brazil at banquet following tremendous reception accorded him on his arrival in Rio de Janeiro.

Roaring Threat to Navy Yard—

A spectacular view of the fire which swept through buildings on Charlestown waterfront in Boston, Mass., and threatened to reach Boston Navy Yard. Greatest concentration of men and apparatus in years was used to gain control of the $350,000 blaze.

Adds Glamor to the Evenings—

This stunning evening gown of grey chiffon, sparkling with silver beads in an all-over pattern, is worn by Ann Southern, beautiful motion picture actress. The cape of the same material is richly trimmed with huge silver fox furs. (Picture at the right)

She's on Program Now

Nina Jarvis, a program girl at the Haymarket Theater in London, England, has put her contacts with the theater to good use. A play written by her is to be produced at another London theater.

Handing the Committee a Beautiful Task—

Directed by Barbara Nichols (extreme left), 1936 Pasadena Rose Queen, 19 beauties, from among whom her successor will be chosen, pass in review before the committee which has difficult task of making selection.
